

Moody E. Prior

The aims and methods of

Science	Humanities
Deals with quantitative data	Deals with emotional matters
Concerned with empirical material	Concerned with understanding and evaluation of human goals
Neutral to the impact of its research and inventions on humanity	Deals with human experience- their meanings and observations
Share the pleasure of creation and beauty
The product can be defined without any reference	The creation is always in some context
Generalizes first to make acute predictions for future methods	Concerned with particular experiences of individuals
The products are personal	Always carries the impression of the creator