March 27-28, 2018

Department of Zoology, University of Lucknow Lucknow

(UGC-SAP DRS II, DST-FIST, DST PURSE Sponsored Department)

Biological Sciences, is the science of the future. Everyday we are racing towards discovering new ways of understanding, controlling and eliminating zoonotic diseases, lifestyle diseases, ageing, food problems, xenobiotics, etc. by involving biotechnology, biochemistry, genetics, proteomics, metabolomics and other newer fields. On the other hand, we are still finding that we do not know all that exists in the world. The search for newer animals, and understanding their structure, form, function, biology, ecology and behaviour, is akin to racing against the sifting sands in the hourglass of extinction.

The Department of Zoology, University of Lucknow, Lucknow cordially invites faculty members, scientists, research scholars and students, exploring various aspects of biological sciences, to the city of Nawabs, Lucknow for the upcoming international symposium on Current Trends in Biological Sciences. In this symposium, we hope to discuss and contemplate on an entire spectrum of biological issues trending in the world, and the biological paths leading towards a brighter future for the world.

The department, in this decade, under the umbrella of UGC-SAP, DST FIST, DST PURSE schemes, has made significant scientific advancements using diverse animal species with impressive impacts on research in the frontier areas of biological sciences. The faculty members of the department are currently active on varied fronts of biological sciences, viz. Protozoology, Parasitology, Environmental Toxicology, Entomology, Chronobiology, Endocrinology, Neurobiology, Fisheries, Human Genetics, Molecular Biology, bone Biology and Wildlife. We are thus uniquely placed with our vast diversity to facilitate a discussion on the current trends in biological sciences.
